

NIDILRR Supports Family Caregivers

The National Institute on Disability, Independent Living, and Rehabilitation Research (NIDILRR) funds important research and advances policies on family support for families of people with disabilities and people who are aging. NIDILRR's research helps improve the health and quality of life for family caregivers of people with disabilities and older adults to maintain independent living in the community. Examples of NIDILRR-funded projects include:

Improving family supports and future planning for people with disabilities across the lifespan

Aiding caregivers of patients with acquired brain injury (ABI) during the transition home from inpatient rehabilitation

Supporting older adults with activity limitations and their family caregivers with aging in place

Promoting solutions for the Direct Care Workforce crisis to increase access to family caregivers

Building the capacity of healthcare, rehabilitation, and public health systems to deliver high-quality, tailored support to family caregivers

Elevating the RAISE Family Caregiver Act which created the first national strategy to support family caregivers

Right now, NIDILRR is under attack, and it is threatened to be eliminated.

Without NIDILRR, we won't see the same progress for family caregivers.
